

The eDiscoveryJournal Report:

Fitting Defensible Collection Into Information Governance Strategies

By:

Greg Buckles & Barry Murphy

Special Thanks to Lance Sloves, Director at Computer Forensics Services, Inc.

(www.cfsiusa.com), for input to this document.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

eDiscovery is a starting point for many organizations' information governance programs.

Implementing effective collection and preservation processes and solutions can dramatically reduce costs and mitigate risks. But, without doing collection in a truly defensible manner, organizations will only make eDiscovery more of a nightmare and face higher costs and negative outcomes. This report shows you how to get started on effective collection initiatives and how to make them defensible.

CONTENTS

Executive Summary	2
Information Governance Becomes Critical	4
A Focus on eDiscovery	6
But eDiscovery Remains A Challenge	8
Fitting Collection Into Your Information Governance Strategy	13

Disclaimer:

eDiscoveryJournal is not a law firm. All expressed opinions and content are provided for general educational purposes only and are not specific legal advice, even if the author is a practicing attorney. Neither eDiscoveryJournal nor the information contained herein should be used as a substitute for competent legal advice from a licensed professional attorney in your state.

eDiscoveryJournal believes reasonable efforts have been made to ensure the accuracy of all eDiscoveryJournal original content. Content may include inaccuracies or typographical errors and may be changed or updated without notice. All eDiscoveryJournal original content is provided "AS IS" and while we endeavor to keep the information up to date and correct, we make no representations or warranties of any kind, express or implied, about the fitness for a particular purpose, completeness, accuracy, reliability, suitability, or availability with respect to the information, products, services, or related graphics for any specific purpose. Any reliance you place on such information is therefore strictly at your own risk.

In no event will eDiscoveryJournal or any of its contributors be liable for any direct, indirect, punitive, incidental, special, or consequential damages or damages for loss of profits, revenue, data, down time, or use, arising out of or in any way connected with the use of the document or performance of any services, whether based on contract, tort, negligence, strict liability or otherwise.