Devender,

If you are going to build a business based on republishing original content, you need a course in the Fair Use exception to copyright infringement. Your site clearly violates the basic fair use principals as well as my explicit Terms of Service. You are publishing my full articles as 'reviewed by Mary B. Knight' with no review, comment or original content added that would tell a reader that this content is not the product of this non-existent 'Mary B. Knight'. As a footer, you have the simple term 'Source' with a link to my site.

Why would a reader go to eDiscoveryJournal.com when you have already hijacked the full content? So you are in fact violating my copyright and stealing my readers and impacting my effective revenue. Furthermore, your site seems to be an automated shell site designed to 'look local'. This fits the recent patterns of foreign actors conducting election and social manipulation within the United States. They build a site with stolen content and local news stories to build an audience and then insert fake content designed to elicit specific reactions or bias.

The 'Mary B. Knight' in the site About Me page does not have any matches in investigation identity databases. The email address and contact form are invalid. The About Me details say that Mary lives in California, but the address is a local residence that is not under the Mary B. Knight name. 'Anderson News Daily' is not a registered entity with the Indiana Secretary of State, despite the site claims that it has been published for 2 years. In fact, you registered the domain in August. As former law enforcement and computer forensics expert, all of these elements indicate that this site was template generated as a false front. I will be publishing this conversation and reporting the site to the appropriate agencies as a possible foreign propaganda mechanism.

As of 9 hours ago your site republished my latest blog. In fact, a quick check shows that you are hijacking several peers content as well. While most marketers want their content to reach as many people as possible, I am betting that they will not be pleased by the association with a potential fraudulent source. I had to work hard to figure out that you are also stealing content from HaystackID, John Patzakis, Digital WarRoom, Kelly Twigger, Percipient.co, Teris and many others.

Cease and desist immediately.

Hi Greg,

I have asked my team to remove all content per your request. I have on each of the pages, a direct link stating that you are the source of all materials and that you own the rights to the content, I truly do not see how this is theft when I am not claiming that the content is my own and the links are brought in via your site RSS feeds. I recommend disabling those so others will not distribute your content and find themselves in similar situations. I do respect your request and position in this matter and as stated above, per this request, I am removing all links.

The content will be removed in the next 24-48 hours.

Regards

Devender,

The current site is scraping and republishing my copyrighted content in violation of my ToS. Since blogging is my business, I consider this theft and fraud. The site search criteria seems to be targeting the legal technology blog community. We are very protective of our content and experts at filing complaints with every appropriate internet regulatory agency (FTC, DOJ, IC3, FCC, etc.). Remove the site or all content stolen from eDiscoveryJournal.com.
